The Challenge

Northleaf completed a two-floor office renovation with the goal of creating a workspace that balanced individual productivity with opportunities for collaboration. A crucial part of the project was their pilot phase, where employees evaluated a variety of different workstation solutions, ancillary products, and focus areas to provide feedback. The pilot revealed that Northleaf's teams required more focus-driven spaces than initially anticipated, but still required areas for team collaboration. This feedback-driven approach allowed Northleaf to not only increase employee engagement and alignment but to optimize the final layout to support both heads-down individual work and collaborative efforts.

This 18-month project resulted in a well-balanced, functional workspace that aligned with Northleaf's operational goals, enhancing the overall employee work experience. Collaboration with key partners, Cresa and SDI, ensured the successful delivery of a workspace that meets both individual and team needs.
